

Training Methodology

The training methodology balances theoretical understanding with practical application, using the 'learning by doing' approach. The course is presented in a blended learning format which includes both face-to-face and online sessions. Workshops, demonstrations, group discussions, presentations, guided online research and hands-on online materials development are some of the strategies and techniques used.

Monitoring and Evaluation Method

Record of attendance will be documented for every session throughout the duration of the course. This will include face-to-face and online sessions. Evaluation is done through in-class and online tasks. An Action Plan is a requirement for course completion.

Targeted Participants

This course is designed for English Language Teaching (ELT) practitioners and specifically for those who wish to take on the role as trainers in extending their training impact within the context of designing online courses. Participants are also expected to have basic ICT literacies.

About The Malaysian Technical Cooperation Programme (MTCP)

The Malaysian Technical Cooperation Programme (MTCP) was first initiated at the First Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting (CHOGM) for Asia Pacific Region in Sydney in February 1978. It was officially launched on 7 September 1980 at the Commonwealth Heads of State Meeting in New Delhi to signify Malaysia's commitment to South-South Cooperation, in particular Technical Cooperation among Developing Countries (TCDC). In line with the spirit of South-South Cooperation, Malaysia - through the MTCP - shares its development experiences and expertise with other developing countries. Initially formulated based on the belief that the development of a country depends on the quality of its human resources, MTCP emphasizes the development of human resources through the provision of training in various areas essential for a country's development.

Since its inception, more than 32,000 participants from 143 recipient countries have been directly trained under MTCP. To date, MTCP has extended its recipient of countries to 143 developing nations for training within its ten (10) key areas.

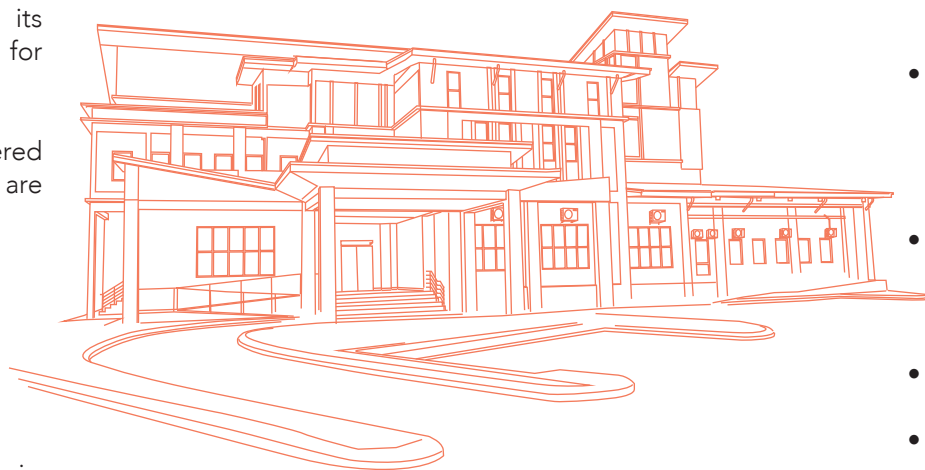

Annually, more than 80 short-term courses are offered by 80 MTCP training institutions, many of which are centres of excellence for training.

Objectives of MTCP

- To share development experience with other countries;
- To strengthen bilateral relations between Malaysia and other developing countries;
- To promote South-South Cooperation (SSC);
- To promote technical cooperation among developing countries (TCDC).

About The English Language Teaching Centre (ELTC)

ELTC was established on 1 June 2002 to undertake the specialist function of enhancing the teaching competencies of English Language teachers. The institution functions as a centre for innovation and research and development in the teaching and learning of English language. The institution is also tasked with the responsibility of setting standards and providing certification for English Language Teaching (ELT) professionals, in addition to developing expertise especially in the field of e-learning for ELT teacher education.

About The Course - Trainer Training on Online ELT Course Design

This full-time, three-week training course with hands-on activities is specifically tailored for ELT practitioners interested in designing online courses. Course participants must have basic ICT literacy skills and are fluent in the English language. The course introduces a variety of training strategies which balances theoretical understanding with practical applications. The 'learning by doing' approach aims to provide hands-on experience in developing online materials.

Objectives

Upon completion of the course, participants will:

- have an understanding of best practices within their own contexts and internationally,
- have awareness of the P21 Framework for 21st Century Learning, as well as ISTE Standards for Teachers and how they can be used as a framework for training and applying key theoretical concepts in online course development,
- make connections between theories and professional practices, and explore ways of supporting professional development of their clients in developing a course in an online Learning Management System (LMS),
- demonstrate an understanding on how to apply adult learning principles into the training room and expose trainers to a wide range of facilitation skills and techniques used for adult learning,
- produce online course materials in different multimedia formats,
- be equipped with skills for trialing an online course prior to implementation,
- have opportunities to make the link between content and practice, and,
- have a platform for critical thinking, reflection, action and change.
